

CURIOUS ABOUT THE MEDICAL USE OF CANNABIS? SO ARE WE!

We invite you to participate in

The CANARY Study: Cannabis Access Regulations Study

Our goal is to better understand the impact of the upcoming changes to federal health regulations on how Canadians access medical cannabis.

The study is being done by researchers at the University of British Columbia in collaboration with the British Columbia Ministry of Health, the Canadian Consortium for the Investigation of Cannabinoids and the Canadian AIDS Society. Other study collaborators include: Canadian Medical Association, Canadian Cancer Society, British Columbia Cancer Agency, Canadian Association of Medical Cannabis Dispensaries, Action Atlantic, Chronic Pain Association of Canada, and Canadian Pain Coalition.

We are looking for people that:

+ have used cannabis as a medicine or have not used cannabis as a medicine + are 19 years old or older + have ARTHRITIS, CANCER, CHRONIC PAIN, HIV/AIDS or other medical conditions

What will the study involve?

- Maximum of four (4) online surveys that will take 30 minutes each to complete.
- Some individuals may be asked to take part in three (3) telephone interviews.
- Surveys and interviews will take place 3-6 months apart over 15-months.
- All information obtained during the study will be confidential.
- A chance to win $50 for taking part in the surveys and interviews.
- The first survey must be completed by April 1, 2014.
